COMMUNICATIONS

October 2020

What's the latest news?

Configuration and Prototype: Stakeholders will see how Workday Financials will work, with preliminary design decisions implemented, in upcoming Customer Confirmation Sessions (CCSs). These sessions will be the first of many opportunities for stakeholders to provide feedback. Read more from James Gorman about what's coming soon.

Change Leaders: Advisory Group members are spinning up as change leaders to engage colleagues in their areas, with the support of an FST team change partner. Look to your area's Advisory Group member/change leader to be your go-to for all things FST—getting information and sharing your feedback. Find your area's change leader\(s\).

Foundation Data Model (FDM): The FST FDM team has identified open design questions that need to be resolved. They've already taken care of several and have a plan for the remaining questions. The preliminary FDM structure is complete, and during the Config and Prototype phase various business processes will be tested. See more about FDM.

FST Website Updates: Info Station Under Construction

We know that you're interested in information related to specific topics, so the Info Station was born. This FST website area is under construction. As it develops, this hub will help you follow topics of interest to you, such as the Foundation Data Model (FDM), Internal Service Providers (ISPs), and Spend.

Workday Word of the Month: Tenant

A Workday tenant is an instance of the Workday software, including data that exists independently of other tenants. There are many types of deployment and production tenants, each intended for a specific use. This term is timely, as the first build of UVA's tenant is taking place now.

See more Workday Words here, and please email word suggestions to financetransformation@virginia.edu.
